Working as a data scientist in industry
Dr. Paul Joubert
(IMS-Alumni, Berlin)

April 13, 2018

I will talk about my experience over the past two years working as a data scientist at Zalando. I will describe one project that I worked on in more detail. Matchmaking is about matching or recommending stylists to customers. Various features of the stylists and the customers are taken into account, and the topic gives rise to several interesting subproblems. I will also discuss some of the differences between industry and academia that I came across.