Professional Biography

I am a New Testament scholar and Classicist. I studied Protestant Theology and Classics at the University of Heidelberg (M.A. 2009, State Exam 2012) and the University of Tübingen, from which I also received a doctoral degree (Dr. phil.) in Classics (2011). Before arriving in Göttingen in 2015, I was a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Tübingen’s Collaborative Research Centre (CRC) 923 “Threatened Orders” and taught courses on early Greek poetry at the Classics Department of the University of Tübingen. In 2017, I received a doctoral degree in Theology/Patristics (Dr. theol.) from the University of Göttingen, where I am currently preparing a monograph on Luke-Acts and teach courses in New Testament.

My doctoral thesis in Classics was awarded the Doctoral Dissertation Award of the Faculty of Philosophy of the University of Tübingen in 2012 and the Manfred Lautenschlaeger Award for Theological Promise in 2014 (University of Heidelberg).

In 2015, I was awarded a Feodor Lynen Research Fellowship of the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation, which I held at University College, Oxford (UK) in 2016. In 2018, I was awarded a research fellowship by the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation to conduct research on marriage and family ethics in the New Testament at Yale Divinity School (New Haven, USA).
