“Tejiendo agua en el territorio” – transdisciplinary participatory community research around Lake San Pablo, Ecuador

Prof. Dr. Elizabeth Velarde (UTN Ibarra, Ecuador)

Weaving water in the territory is an inspiring initiative that brings together science, ancestral wisdom, and community leadership to protect and restore high-Andean lake ecosystems. From the living waters of Lago San Pablo, the project demonstrates how indigenous knowledge, women's leadership, and limnological research can weave solutions for water sustainability and climate resilience. This presentation invites you to be part of a collective movement that honors water as life and transforms territories through collaboration, knowledge, and action.

Everyone is highly welcome! Afterwards, we'll serve coffee, tea, cookies!
(Also let edietze@uni-goettingen.de know if you like to join dinner)
