“Globalization and the Rise of Mass Education”: Book Launch

Göttingen, December 03, 2019
Venue: Oeconomicum 1.134

This workshop is an interdisciplinary pre-launch of the book “Globalization and the Rise of Mass Education”, edited by David Mitch (University of Maryland-Baltimore County) and Gabriele Cappelli (University of Sienna).

The event aims at providing a platform to discuss the themes of globalization, human capital formation, long-run development, and international migration.

Structure

The workshop will bring together specialists in the fields of economic history and development economics who contributed to the aforementioned book. Each presenter will have his/her chapter commented by a specialist, who will raise points for an open debate with the audience.

Jointly organized by the Center for Global Migration Studies and the Courant Center – “Poverty, Equity and Growth in Developing Countries”, the workshop aims at providing an interdisciplinary approach to the themes of globalization and education.

Attendance is free of charge and registration is not required.
