(Anti-)reconstruction effects in predicate fronting constructions

Petr Kusliy (University of Göttingen)

In this talk, I discuss known and new data from English predicate fronting constructions that exhibit some theoretically unexpected patterns in connectivity and anti-connectivity for Condition C. I argue that these data cannot be captured in terms of a purely structural or semantic approach. I explore the information structure of the sentences that exhibit the relevant contrasts as a way to shed light on the puzzle that they illustrate.