Examination and Study Regulations for the Bachelor's degree programme "Weltliteratur/World Literature" of the University of Göttingen

§ 1 Scope

(1) The "General Examination Regulations for Bachelor's and Master's Degree Programmes as well as other courses and degrees offered at the Georg-August-Universität Göttingen" (APO) apply in their respectively valid forms to the Bachelor's degree programme "Weltliteratur/World Literature" at the University of Göttingen.

(2) These regulations stipulate the additional provisions for the Bachelor's degree programme "Weltliteratur/World Literature".

§ 2 Objectives of the Programme; Purpose of the Examination; Working Fields

(1) ¹The Bachelor's degree programme "Weltliteratur/World Literature" teaches students scientific principles and methods in the subject of World Literature, along with other professional field-related competencies. ²This enables the graduates of this course of study to apply and communicate scientific findings in the chosen subjects in practice, to form professionally sound judgements, to critically reflect on new scientific results and to assess their practical value. ³They are enabled to follow the scientific development of their chosen subjects through self-study.

(2) ¹The Bachelor's degree programme "Weltliteratur/World Literature" is divided into the fields of literature and cultural studies, language practice and preparation for professional activities.

(3) ¹Students are able

- to explore the field of tension between national and world literary perspectives and thereby understand the ambivalence between interculturality and cultural identity;
- to understand the specifics of the fundamentally different world literary relationship styles and thereby also the resulting cultural consequences;
- to reconstruct and culturally contextualize literary relationships on the basis of a knowledge of basic literary style formations;
- to recognise the possibilities of expression and the basic genres resulting from them, or the genre specificity for inter-cultural literary comparison, and to analyse their combinatorics, their interaction and their mutual influence;
- to examine world literary relational phenomena with their knowledge and ability to deal with reference texts received worldwide in the sense of the current expansion and renewal of the concept of world literature;
- to understand the different concepts of world literature and to understand the controlled and structural processes of literary canonization that essentially control the globalisation of literature.

²In addition, the students obtain

- a knowledge of the literary aspects of migration and identity, as well as post-colonial and transcultural approaches in literary studies.

(4) ¹In addition to a standard-compliant and reliable command of spoken and written German and English, the Bachelor's subject "Weltliteratur/World Literature" also requires knowledge or learning of another literary language to a level that allows reading of source texts. ²This makes it possible to at least partially do justice to the essentially linguistic character of literature.

(5) ¹Students are trained for the international book and literature market. They acquire

- elementary literary knowledge of the world;
- the skills to understand literature as a global and globally networked phenomenon and to classify literary texts in this network;
- techniques of scientific and journalistic work on literary texts;
- the repertoire of literary processes and their changing functions;
- the competence to judge literary quality by their respective handling of this repertoire and its creative functionalisation;
- the ability to classify literary texts in their immediate cultural context and to assess their potential beyond this context.

²These skills qualify them as actors in the literary field - from author to literary agent, publisher, editor, rights dealer, translator to literary mediator, manager of literary houses, literary festivals, literary fairs, literary museums and exhibitions.

(6) The bachelor examination will ascertain whether the examinee has indeed acquired the specialised knowledge required for the purpose of the degree programme, understands the connections and possesses the ability to work in accordance with scientific principles and to communicate scientific insight.

(7) Depending on the use of options at course level, the programme prepares for a possible transition to consecutive Master's degree programmes in the following subject areas: Slavic Philology, Medieval and Renaissance Studies, Romance Philology, Arabic Studies/Islamic Studies, Inter-cultural German Studies, North American Studies, English Philology, German Philology and Scandinavian Studies.

§ 3 Recommended Prior Knowledge

¹We recommend a knowledge of the basic texts of one's own cultural area - for European applicants for university, e.g., the Bible, Homeric epics or well-known medieval sagas - as well as fairy tales.

²Reading cultural or literary historical overviews is also useful for preparation. ³A list of recommendations will be made available on the programme's websites.

§ 4 Academic Degree

Once the bachelor degree examination has been passed, the Georg-August-Universität Göttingen awards the academic title "Bachelor of Arts" (abbreviated: "B.A.").

§ 5 Structure of the Course; Standard Length of Course

(1) The Bachelor's degree programme starts with the winter semester.

(2) The standard course length is six semesters.

(3) The degree programme cannot be done part-time.

(4) The academic programme comprises 180 credits (ECTS credits; abbreviated as: C), which are distributed as follows:

a) to the professional studies at least 132 C,

b) to the area of professionalisation at least 31 C,

c) 12 C for the bachelor thesis.

(5) ¹The study and examination components are to be accomplished in compulsory and optional modules; the module overview (appendix I) stipulates these binding. ²The module index is published separately; it is part of this regulation as far as the modules are listed in the module overview

(appendix I).³A summary of the distribution of modules across the periods of study is contained in the appendix (appendix II).

(6) Appendix III gives recommendations for the enrolment of courses within the modules of the curriculum with a view to the connectivity of consecutive Master's degree programmes at the University of Göttingen.

§ 6 Admission to Courses with a Restricted Number of Participants

(1) ¹The admission to certain courses or modules (in the following: Courses) can be restricted by a resolution passed by the Faculty Council responsible, if the inherent nature of the content of said courses or their proper implementation necessitates such a measure. ²The conditions of admission must be announced in advance. ³The person in charge of the course will allocate the places. ⁴In the event of any conflict, the dean of studies concerned will make a ruling.

(2) ¹In terms of the admission to courses as described under section 1 that offer a restricted number of places, the following procedure shall be applied in the event that the number of registrations exceeds the number of places and in the event that it is not possible to offer any parallel event: Registrations will be considered in order of ranking groups in the following order, whereby the registration by students in this degree programme, or in a degree programme for which the involved faculties provides teaching exports, will be given preferential treatment in the allocation of courses that refer to compulsory or optional aspects of this degree programme or the imported degree programme over students of other degree programmes external to the faculty:

a) Registration by students in the respective subject semester, for which the seminar is offered as a compulsory course according to the Study or Examination Regulations, and those who have not attended this seminar and successfully completed it. Equal ranking shall be given to registration by students who satisfied the preconditions as laid down in sentence 1 in the previous semester and, despite orderly registration, were unable to receive a place or, due to allocation of a compulsory course taking place simultaneously in a subject studied concurrently, were unable to accept the allocation. Sentences 1 and 2 apply accordingly to courses relating to sections within a degree programme.

b) Registration by students in subject semesters, who deviate from the preconditions laid down in letter a) by one semester or were unable to successfully complete the course in the previous semester or were unable to regularly attend or successfully complete the course in the previous semester due to illness - without having a leave of absence. A doctor's certificate must be submitted as proof of illness.

c) Registration by students from subject semesters who deviate by two or more semesters from the preconditions laid down in letter a).

d) Registration by students in the respective study semester or section of their degree programme for whom the course is provided as an optional required course according to the Study Regulations, and who satisfy the requirements defined in letter a).

e) Registration by students from subject semesters who deviate by one or more semesters from the requirements defined in letter d).

f) Registration by students who wish to attend the course as an optional subject within their degree programme.

g) Other registration by students.

²In the event that it is not possible to consider all registrations by students within one ranking group, the time of registration shall be decisive. In the event that this still produces equality of rank, a lottery procedure shall decide. ³The procedure shall be announced with sufficient notice in advance. ⁴At the same time as its resolution as specified under sentence 1, the Faculty Council responsible must define a final closing date for registrations to the course in question.

(3) ¹In the event that all students within ranking groups specified under section 2 letters a) to c) in a semester cannot be considered for a course, the Faculty Council responsible shall specify a sufficiently higher number of places for the next semester within the scope of what is possible in terms of staff and infrastructure. ²This shall not apply in the event that the expected number of participants will most probably permit consideration of the students assigned to ranking groups as specified in section 2 a) to c).

(4) The responsible Faculty Council is entitled to install a central procedure for access to certain courses under its auspices that deviates from the procedure laid down in sections 2 and 3.

§ 7 Subject-specific Examination and Teaching Types

(1) Besides the examination components allowed according to the provisions of APO, the following subject-specific examination components can be planned: portfolio, self-study, mid-term written examination, mid-term oral examination, language competence exam und mid-term assignment/paper.

(2) A portfolio ('document folder') helps students document and annotate their own periods of studies in a reflective manner. Portfolios collate various shorter tasks (e.g., logs of hours, internship report, reading summaries; multimedia tasks may also be included).

(3) A self-study unit serves to work on core areas of the selected lecture in depth. These can be primary texts, central texts of secondary literature or other materials (e.g., works of art, extra-literary texts).

(4) ¹A mid-term written examination tests the knowledge acquired in a lecture or in an exercise at approximately halfway through the course. ²It lasts 45 minutes.

(5) A mid-term oral examination tests the speaking and listening skills acquired in a language course approximately halfway through the course. It lasts approximately 20 minutes.

(6) ¹A language proficiency exam covers all five language skills (listening, reading, writing, oral expression, translation). ²It consists of an oral part (speaking and listening comprehension; approx. 10-30 min.) and a written part (text editing, grammar, vocabulary, translation; total length of the exam approx. 150 min.).

(7) A mid-term paper or mid-term assignment is a written assignment of no more than 3000 words, which documents the learning progress about halfway through a lecture.

§ 8 Admission to the Bachelor Thesis

(1) ¹The bachelor thesis can be written in all included fields of study or in another selected field of study (the specific regulations for the fields of study for the bachelor thesis can be found in appendix III.). ²Admission to the bachelor thesis in the subject "Weltliteratur/World Literature" requires proof of at least 100 C from the curriculum. ³As a rule, the bachelor thesis is supervised by university teachers from two different participating institutions.

(2) ¹Admission to the bachelor thesis must be applied for to the responsible examination board. ²The following material must be enclosed with the application:

- a) evidence that the requirements specified in Section 1 have been met,
- b) the proposal of topic for the bachelor thesis,
- c) a proposal for the first academic advisor or the second academic advisor,
- d) written confirmation of the first academic advisor and the second academic advisor,
- e) a declaration specifying that the bachelor degree examination has not been failed definitively or registered as definitively failed in the same or comparable bachelor degree programme at a domestic or foreign university.

³The proposals under Lit. b) and c) as well as the proof as specified under Lit. d) are unnecessary if the student provides assurance that he or she has been unable to find an academic advisor. ⁴In this case, the examination board shall appoint supervisors and shall determine the topic of the bachelor thesis.

(3) ¹The examination board shall decide on admission. ²This is to be rejected if the qualifications for entry are not fulfilled or the bachelor examination in the same or similar degree programme at a domestic or foreign university has been definitively failed.

§ 9 Bachelor Thesis

(1) ¹The provisional working topic of the bachelor thesis should be agreed with the proposed academic advisor and submitted with confirmation from the second academic advisor to the examination board concerned. ²In the event of the candidate being unable to find an academic advisor, the examination board will specify an academic advisor and a topic. ³The candidate's view should be considered in choosing the topic. ⁴The right to make a proposal for the choice of topic does not constitute a legal right. ⁵The chairman of the examination board will issue the topic of the bachelor thesis. ⁶The time of issue must be recorded.

(2) ¹The preparation time of the bachelor thesis amounts to 12 weeks. ²Upon application by the candidate, the examination board can extend the deadline for submitting the thesis by a maximum of 4 weeks, upon agreement with the first academic advisor and existence of an important reason that cannot be attributed to the candidate. ³An important reason normally exists in the case of an illness that is to be notified immediately and established by producing a medical certificate.

(3) ¹The topic can be returned only once and only within the first 4 weeks of the time allotted for completing the thesis. ²A new topic must be agreed upon immediately, but no later than within 4 weeks. ³In the event that a bachelor thesis is repeated, the topic may be returned only in accordance with sentence one if the examinee has not resorted to this option in the first submission of the bachelor thesis.

(4) ¹The bachelor thesis must be submitted within the due period to the relevant examination office in duplicate. Additionally, a text version must be submitted in the format of a commonly used word processing program or in PDF format (unprotected) and it must be ensured that the written version and the supplementary version submitted match each other. ²The bachelor thesis should also be submitted in electronic form after further determination by the examination board. ³The time of submission should be recorded. ⁴Upon submission, the candidate should declare in writing that he or she has independently compiled the work and has not used any sources and tools other than those specified.

(5) ¹The examination board will assign the bachelor thesis to the first supervisor as well as to the second supervisor as reviewers/evaluators. ²Each reviewer will award a grade.

(6) The duration of the assessment procedure shall not exceed 8 weeks.

§ 10 Reassessment Guidelines for Grade Improvement

¹A module examination for the modules B.WLI.101 "Function and Eras of World Literature" passed at the first attempt within the standard study period can be repeated once for the purpose of improving grades. ²Reassessment does not lead to any devaluation of the grade. ³The repeat must take place at the next possible examination time.

§ 11 Examination Board

(1) ¹The examination board consists of five members appointed by the respective group representatives on the Faculty Council for the Faculty of Humanities, specifically, three members of the professorial group, one member of the staff group and one member of the student group. ²At the same time, a deputy is nominated for each member. ³If a member or a representative steps down prematurely, a substitute will be nominated for the remaining tenure.

(2) ¹The implementation and organisation of the examination procedure is delegated to the examination management at the Faculty of Mathematics and Computer Science, without prejudice to the competencies of the dean of studies. ²It also maintains the examination records. ³It reports regularly to the faculty on examinations and course lengths. ⁴In this case, compliance with the standard course lengths and the distribution of module and current average grades in particular should be itemised. ⁵The report is to be published by the university in a suitable manner.

(3) The examination board will choose a chairperson and their deputy from the professorial group.

(4) The ongoing operations may be transferred to the chairperson.

§ 12 Grade Point Average; Peremptory Failure

(1) The bachelor examination is passed if at least 180 credits were acquired and all of the required module examinations as well as the bachelor thesis have been passed.

a) is at least 1.3 and the bachelor thesis is awarded the grade 1.0, or

b) reaches at least the grade 1.5, the bachelor thesis is awarded the grade 1.0 and the examination board decides on the award on the basis of a special achievement; special achievements include, in particular,

aa) a grade average that is considerably above the grade average of the technically comparable graduates of the same semester is regarded as special achievements,

bb) a study or examination achievement of considerable scientific significance, which may result in particular from a publication in a specialist journal or from an award.

§ 13 Study Consultation and Support

(1) ¹Students are required to visit the faculty's examination and study advisory service as well as the specialist advisory service of the included subjects throughout their studies and to consult, in the case of a corresponding study option, the coordination of the double-degree programmes of the participating subjects. ²These are responsible for supporting individual study planning. ³The students are advised to consult the student advisory service, especially at the start of the programme and before decisions on changes to their study plan. Furthermore, it should also be consulted when planning study abroad, participation in the double degree programme given under § 14 and § 14a, and after failing any examinations.

(2) All lecturers of the study area and their colleagues are available during their consulting hours for providing study advisory service relating to special study areas.

(3) Individual study advisory service is provided by a lecturer of the relevant subjects, if the student is entitled to only one reassessment opportunity for the examination of a compulsory module or optional required module.

(4) In examination matters and for questions regarding accreditation of study and examination prerequisites, advice is offered especially by the colleagues of the responsible examination office.

(5) ¹Besides the study advisory service of the faculty, the students have access to the Central Student Advisory Office of the Georg-August-Universität. ²As general study advisory service, it furnishes information in the case of interdisciplinary issues, as well as study opportunities, contents, structure and requirements of a course of studies and advises in the case of study-related personal difficulties.

(2) ¹Students who entered their studies prior to the entry into force of an amendment of these regulations and who have been continuously enrolled since, will be examined according to the examination and study regulations in the version prior to the entry into force of the amendment. ²In the case of pending examinations, this does not apply to module overviews and descriptions, unless the legal entitlements of a student calls for a different decision by the examination board. ³A different decision can be reached especially in cases where an examination can be repeated or a compulsory or elective compulsory module has changed significantly or been cancelled. ⁴The examination board can draw up general rules for this purpose. ⁵Examinations according to these regulations in the version prior to the entry into force of the amendment will be conducted for the last time in the fourth semester after entry into force of the amendment. ⁶Students identified in sentence 1 may submit an application if they wish to be examined according to the amended regulations.

(3) ¹Deviating from section 2, students who began their studies prior to 30.09.2019 will be examined according to the current Examination and Study Regulations in the version published on 01.10.2019; students may submit an application until 31.03.2020 if they wish to be examined according to the regulations in the version valid until 30.09.2019. ²Nevertheless, if the current Examination and Study Regulations in the version from 01.10.2019 are applicable, this does not touch upon the course of studies completed prior to 30.09.2019, especially successfully completed module examinations. ³If the current Examination and Study Regulations in the version valid until 30.09.2019 are applicable, this applies specifically to pending examinations, however not to the module directory or module descriptions, unless the protection of trust toward the student suggests a deviating decision granted by the examination board. ⁴A deviating decision is possible especially in such cases where an examination component may be repeated or where a compulsory or elective compulsory module has been changed considerably or been cancelled. ⁵The examination board may formulate general regulations in this context. ⁶Examinations according to these Examination and Study Regulations in the version valid until 30.09.2019 will be conducted for the last time during the summer semester of 2022.

(4) ¹Departing from section 2, students who began their studies before 30.09.2020 shall be examined in accordance with these Examination and Study Regulations in the version valid from 01.10.2020; on application, to be submitted by 31.03.2021 at the latest, they shall be examined in accordance with the provisions of these Examination and Study Regulations in the version valid up to 30.09.2020. ²Insofar as these Examination and Study Regulations are to be applied in the version valid from 01.10.2020, courses of study completed by 30.09.2020, in particular module examinations passed or failed, shall remain unaffected. ³Insofar as these Examination and Study Regulations apply in the version valid until 30.09.2020, this shall not apply to module overviews and descriptions in the case of examinations still to be taken, unless the protection of a student's legitimate expectations requires a deviating decision by the examination board. ⁴A deviating decision is possible in particular in cases in which an examination performance can be repeated or a compulsory or compulsory elective module has been substantially changed or cancelled. ⁵The examination board may make general regulations in this regard. ⁶Examinations according to these examination and study regulations in the version valid until 30.09.2020 shall be taken for the last time in the summer semester 2023.
