"Management of collaborative research at University of Goettingen; Initiative, Implementation and Sustainability; Some Lessons Learned"

Abstract:

To build successful international research collaboration, a lot of things need to be paid attention for, not only during preparation phase, but also while running the collaboration. Often underestimated is the time needed to prepare the legal framework as precondition for any further step of the collaboration. Different legal systems apply. Competitive funding or different funding scheme in general may make it difficult to provide sufficient funding to cover all aspects of the collaboration. Partners need to have a clear mutual understanding of the goals and requirements to be able to develop fruitful and sustainable international research collaboration.

On example of Collaborative Research Centre EForTS (CRC 990), between the University of Goettingen and the Consortium of Universities in Indonesia, the presentation introduces to the preparation and implementation process of this interdisciplinary basic science collaboration.
