The Induction Week is aimed at first-year students who start their degree programme at Göttingen University. On Monday and Wednesday we explain what the BA programme in English/English Philology contains, how the programme is laid out and what courses students have to take in their first semester. After that, the Students' Representatives take over and show our 'freshers' round the campus, introduce them to key places and ensure they get to know each other. Thursday of that week is the day for both socialising and seriously getting down to business: The Students' Representatives cordially invite you to the Great Freshers' Breakfast which also includes planning students' individual timetables. Further information is given in the introductory talks on Mon/Wed. These introductory talks are the same on both days. For further information on the Induction Week organisation as a whole, please visit the Faculty's website at <http://www.uni-goettingen.de/de/79992.html> .

Zielgruppe

First-year students of English (for future teachers) and English Philology (everyone else). Future WiPäd students who wish to study English as their minor subject are also warmly welcome.

Module

B.EP.01.1A: Grundlagen der Literatur- und Kulturwissenschaft

Kommentar

The aim of the course is to introduce students of literature to the basic terminological and theoretical apparatus needed for the study of literature in the English language. The necessarily selective contents of the course fall mainly into 3 categories: critical terminology (for poetry, prose, and drama analysis), concepts of literary theory, and British literary history. An introduction to the methodology of academic research is also included (e.g., MLA data bank and bibliographic style).

You will need an overall 60% score to pass this course.

Please note: To ensure a good level of supervision, the number of participants is strictly limited to 25.

Reading: Each lecturer will announce on what required reading the course will be based.

Requirements: Attendance in the first session is mandatory.

Registration: in StudIP (Thursday, 17 October 15h to Friday, 25 October 23h59, 2019)

Kommentar This course will familiarize you with academic conventions (e.g. style and referencing) and compositional skills required to craft a compelling essay/term paper on a piece of literature. In each session, we will focus on one component of academic writing to help you develop a claim and to expand as well as strengthen it with scholarly sources. We will discuss your assignments and critically review sample essays on literary subjects. Since this course has a heavy workload, you will come to class every fortnight and submit one assignment each week. Assessment is by means of a portfolio.

Courses are strictly limited to 30 students per class. Students should take English Grammar and Academic Writing in the same semester. If you miss more than one session, you cannot pass the course.

Kommentar	This course will familiarize you with academic conventions (e.g. style and referencing) and compositional skills required to craft a compelling essay/term paper on a piece of literature. In each session, we will focus on one component of academic writing to help you develop a claim and to expand as well as strengthen it with scholarly sources. We will discuss your assignments and critically review sample essays on literary subjects. Since this course has a heavy workload, you will come to class every fortnight and submit one assignment each week. Assessment is by means of a portfolio.
	Courses are strictly limited to 30 students per class. Students should take English Grammar and Academic Writing in the same semester. If you miss more than one session, you cannot pass the course.

Module	B.EP.T7ErasELP.Phon: Sprachpraxis - Phonetics: Klausur B.EP.03b.1: Sprachpraxis - Foundations of Phonetics
Organisatorisches	Registration Stud.IP: 1 Sept (08:00 h) - 6 Oct (23:59 h)
Kommentar	This is an introductory course on phonetics and phonology based on British English. You will have to learn some theory but the course is designed to be practical in that we will be discussing the way phonetics and phonology influence the meaning and the function of spoken and written English. We will look at and discuss various aspects of phonetics and phonology, e.g. the organs of speech, the manner and place of articulation, intonation, rhythm, and connected speech. You will also have to learn how to transcribe. You cannot do the course without the Reader. Please also see my course description in the Reader. Sign-up is via StudIP. Participation limit is 80 per semester.

This course should be taken parallel to an Oral Practice Course.

451969	Introduction to American Phonetics (AE)	Stone, Jeff

Module	B.EP.201.PrVor: Introduction to British Cultural Studies
Kommentar	Cultural Studies is an interdisciplinary area of research, exploring the ways and forms in which human beings experience the world. The theoretical concepts which will be analysed are concerned with the relations between cultural forms and their social, political and economic context as well as the symbolic attributions to practices of everyday life. The module is meant to give students an introduction to and overview of British Cultural Studies. This course is designed to help deepen students' understanding of the texts by discussing the various theories. The focus will be on an active examination of the relevant critical ideas and theories, while the development of British Cultural Studies and the application of theories to fields of literary and cultural practice will also be considered. Please note: To ensure a good level of supervision, the number of participants is strictly limited to 25. Reading: To be announced through StudIP. Students are advised to take note that this is a reading-intensive course and to plan for that in their schedules. Requirements: Attendance in the first session is mandatory. Registration: in StudIP (1 September to 13 October)

Kommentar In this course we shall read selected Canadian novels dealing with the internment of Japanese-Canadians during the Second World War after the Pearl Harbour attack. This episode in Canadian history is little known in Europe and it is one of several historical examples that comes to destabilize the more familiar image of Canada as the more tolerant, open-minded and multiculturalist country than its southern neighbour, the United States. The redress campaign (1984-88) led by Roy Miki resulted in a settlement that offered some financial compensation to displaced Japanese-Canadians, but, most importantly, the campaign raised the nation's awareness of the discrimination and wrongdoing against its citizens of Japanese origin. The texts discussed in this seminar are part of the still ongoing processing of the collective and individual traumas caused by the internment. Please purchase your own copies of the following novels: Joy Kogawa, Obasan (1981), Kerri Sakamoto, The Electrical Field (1998) and Frances Itani, Requiem (2011). Please read Obasan before the beginning of the term.

This is a 201 course whose aim is threefold. First, it seeks to familiarize students with the selected texts and their reception as well as to locate the texts in their historical and political context. Furthermore, it introduces students to academic research and writing; and, finally, it encourages students to be critical thinkers themselves with a view to writing their first academic paper in English literature. It is essential that students do all reading and attend regularly and actively.

Kommentar

Romantic writers are probably best known for their descriptions of nature for which they themselves claimed authenticity and spontaneity, and upon which they projected not only their feelings and individuality, but also their ideas of morality, politics and progress. They were also great travellers and their descriptions of foreign landscapes are inflected by a variety of factors, such as their imagination and the aesthetics of the sublime, the beautiful and the picturesque, but also by their Britishness, gender, class and political convictions. All in all, Romanticism invented a way of writing about nature that still influences the way we think of nature and what is natural today. We shall read, critically and ecocritically, a wide selection of nature poetry, for instance by William Wordsworth, whose work inspired contemporary critic Alan Liu to decree that "there is no nature," but only culturally determined ways of writing about it; Charlotte Smith's long poem, Beachy Head; and Mary Wollstonecraft's Scandinavian Letters; as well as landscape descriptions from Romantic novels such as Mary Shelley's Frankenstein. Please purchase an edition of Letters Written during a Short Residence in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark (these three editions are recommended: Penguin, ed. Richard Holmes, Oxford World's Classics, ed. Tone Brekke and Jon Mee, or the Broadview edition, ed. Ingrid Horrocks) and read it before the beginning of the class. A selection of poetry and shorter excerpts will be available via Stud.IP.

Kommentar	British theatre in the 1990s saw the emergence of vibrant, outrageous and innovative new writing that Aleks Sierz termed "in-yer-face" theatre. Indebted to Antonin Artaud's "theatre of cruelty" and following in the footsteps of Edward Bond's controversial play Saved, young playwrights such as Sarah Kane, Mark Ravenhill and Martin McDonagh defined this dramatic genre that has shocked and shaken audiences ever since. This course will trace the historical roots of in-yer-face theatre before exploring to what extent the plays' shock tactics and theatrical innovations provide critical comments on topics such as war, consumerism, family, and masculinity. Reading: Sarah Kane, Blasted; Mark Ravenhill, Shopping and Fucking; Martin McDonagh, The Beauty Queen of Leenane, Jez Butterworth, Mojo. Students are expected to get hold of their own copies of the plays. Apart from Mojo, all other plays are available in The Methuen Book of Modern Drama: Plays of the '80s and '90s (Bloomsbury, 2001). Apart from Blasted, all other plays are also available for free on Drama Online with our subscription. Regular attendance and active participation is required. Additional reading will be provided in StudIP. Please note: This course addresses sensitive content such as war, violence, and rape that may be difficult for some people to be exposed to. Module	B.EP.201.PrVor: Introduction to British Cultural Studies
Kommentar	Cultural Studies is an interdisciplinary area of research, exploring the ways and forms in which human beings experience the world. The theoretical concepts which will be analysed are concerned with the relations between cultural forms and their social, political and economic context as well as the symbolic attributions to practices of everyday life. The module is meant to give students an introduction to and overview of British Cultural Studies. This course is designed to help deepen students' understanding of the texts by discussing the various theories. The focus will be on an active examination of the relevant critical ideas and theories, while the development of British Cultural Studies and the application of theories to fields of literary and cultural practice will also be considered. Please note: To ensure a good level of supervision, the number of participants is strictly limited to 25.

Reading: To be announced through StudIP. Students are advised to take note that this is a reading-intensive course and to plan for that in their schedules.

Requirements: Attendance in the first session is mandatory.

Registration: in StudIP (1 September to 13 October)

This lecture series will focus on the heterogeneity of 20-century and contemporary Anglophone writing by introducing diverse literary and cultural traditions, among them those of Nigeria, South Africa, India, Canada, the Caribbean, Australia, New Zealand, and Ireland. With the help of key fictional narratives and selected non-fictional texts that illuminate the historical and political background against which these traditions developed, lectures will address the postcolonial negotiations of the heritage of empire, the establishment of an own identity, and, in some cases, the gradual shift towards transcultural and global literary writing.

Readings: selected short fiction (to be found in StudIP) and the following novels (to be acquired by students): Chinua Achebe, Things Fall Apart; Michael Ondaatje, The English Patient; Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, Heat and Dust; J.M. Coetzee, Disgrace; and Mohsin Hamid, Exit West.

Perhaps no other literary movement has been as transformative for the modern world as Romanticism. Informed by the political revolutions in America, France and Haiti, the agricultural and industrial revolution in Britain as well as the Napoleonic Wars, the Romantics set in motion a radical movement which positioned itself against the norms and literary forms of expression of the Enlightenment, embraced subjectivity as the dominant poetical position and regarded the imagination as the supreme faculty of the mind. This lecture series aims at connecting the political and social events of the period with its diverse literary forms of expression, covering Romantic poetry, novels and drama. It will draw on new approaches in Romanticism studies, which have long moved away from focussing on the "Big Six", namely William Wordsworth, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, William Blake, Percy Bysshe Shelley, John Keats and Lord Byron, and are nowadays informed by a more inclusive, broader understanding of the Romantic canon as well as critical impulses from gender studies and postcolonial studies.

Kommentar	Margaret Atwood is one of Canada's most successful and popular writers and well known for the power of her fiction, the intricacies of her poetry, and the illumination of her literary criticism. She is best known for her environmental and especially feminist perspective. Her novel The Handmaid's Tale (1985) together with the Hulu TV adaptation has become a major instrument for political and human rights activism this year for example. Although having a great focus on environmental and political issues commented in her dystopian fictions, Atwood has rooted most of her writings on and in her own country of Canada, especially her earlier texts. Consequently, this seminar will investigate the idea of Canada, its nature and people, in Atwood's fictions. We will discuss concepts of national and gender identities, the concern about conservation and preservation of nature, i.e. the relationship between nature and culture, and the literary imagination of the Canadian North as a mystique land and its impact on Canadian writers.

Mary Wollstonecraft (1759-1797) is the author of A Vindication of the Rights of Woman (1792), which has earned her the accolade of mother of feminism, but she is also the mother of one of the best-known novelists in the English language, Mary Shelley. Mary Wollstonecraft was associated with the circle of radical dissenters and thinkers around Rev. Dr. Richard Price through whom she met her publisher, Joseph Johnson, who was to introduce her to the revolutionary writer Thomas Paine and to her future husband, the radical philosopher William Godwin. Johnson's commission for an eye-witness epistolary account of the French Revolution took her to France in 1792 where she became acquainted with the English and American circle of expatriates who were supporters of the Revolution, including Helen Maria Williams, and the American Gilbert Imlay, who would become her lover and the father of her first child. Wollstonecraft was a radical thinker and her work is a call for social and political reform, most pressingly for an improvement of the education of girls and the lives of women. We shall read her two Vindications (of the Rights of Men and of the Rights of Woman), excerpts from her eye-witness account of the French Revolution, her Scandinavian Letters, and her novel Maria, or the Wrongs of Woman, as well as other shorter texts and excerpts which will be provided via Stud.IP. Please purchase your own copies of Mary Wollstonecraft's A Vindication of the Rights of Men; A Vindication of the Rights of Woman; An Historical and Moral View of the French Revolution (Oxford World's Classics); Maria, or the Wrongs of Woman (preferably the Norton edition or Oxford World's Classics), and an edition of Letters Written during a Short Residence in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark (these three editions are recommended: Penguin, ed. Richard Holmes, Oxford World's Classics, ed. Tone Brekke and Jon Mee, or the Broadview edition, ed. Ingrid Horrocks).

This course will explore recent plays by contemporary female (and feminist) British dramatists, giving students ample opportunities to perfect their analytical skills in a genre that is less well known and studied than poetry or the novel. We will investigate how these plays are situated within the tradition of British theatre, which political and social topics they address and we will finally ask whether gender is still a relevant analytical category when it comes to discussing drama. All plays are available on the database "Drama Online", recently acquired by the SUB. A list of the plays we will read in the course will be put on StudIP shortly before registration date.

Human relations are lived, practised and organised largely through kin relations. These are, however, not just biological or familial bonds but organised by society. Heteronormativity and incest taboo are old cultural concepts that determine or forbid kinship relations. In the twenty-first century new forms of kinship - social and biological - increasingly question traditional forms of kinship. This FoLL Project* invites BA students to explore how kinship is represented in contemporary TV and web series. Among others, we will investigate the role of genealogy and kinship based on blood relations in Game of Thrones and Modern Family, social forms of kinship in series such as Friends, the queering of kinship and new forms of kinship through IVF technology in the Australian series Sisters. The research project will include individual and group work and will end with a final project presentation.

Kommentar	This course will begin on 7 November 2019 and will be taught by our visiting lecturer Dr. Julie Kraft.  Literary representations of food often symbolize deeper issues such as sexuality, otherness, and social status. They were especially rich in the Victorian period, when urbanization, empire, and the New Poor Laws were changing the quality and availability of staples like bread and milk, as well as of luxuries like coffee and curry.  In this class, we will be reading Christina Rossetti's "Goblin Market," as well as excerpts of Charles Dickens' Oliver Twist and Bram Stoker's Dracula to uncover how Victorian identity was defined, in part, by the foods and drinks that Victorians consumed. In the process, we will be reviewing the fundamentals of analyzing and writing about literature in preparation for a 4000-word term paper. Regular attendance is required, as is active participation in class discussions and writing workshops. You may not miss more than two sessions.

Kommentar	Are you interested in the history of English literature? If you are a BA student, this course expects you to have completed module B.EP.202 Anglophone Literature and Culture II as a prerequisite. MA students usually have covered periods in English literary history in their previous degree programme. Are you now hooked on - or at least interested in - knowing more about English literature, its key texts, key authors and what makes them canonical? This self-study unit is designed to broaden and deepen your knowledge of two periods in the history of English literature with the help of books on literary history and anthologies. In particular, you will get a good overview of each period you are tackling, with in-depth information on what shapes the period itself, on authors and their texts, and on the developments within genres. At the same time you will experience that books on history are nothing to be afraid of - indeed, they can be positively enjoyable. (Not all of them are, but we will skirt around the ones that are extremely boring, prosy or ancient!)

Note that this is a self-study unit. It expects students to work on their own, or in groups of two or three students. It is not a course that is taught on a weekly basis though it is organized around tasks to be completed on a week-by-week basis. Communication and feedback will be by email and in one-on-two meetings on Thursday mornings. As such, this course expects quite an amount of self-discipline on the part of the participants - but fear not, the unit is structured in such a way as to help you cope with this if you are willing to put some work in! For more information, visit

This is the first in a series of four lecture courses offered consecutively over a period of two years. It is designed to acquaint students with the literature and culture of North America from the late sixteenth- through the early nineteenth-centuries, i.e. the period of exploration and settlement, the American Revolution, the Early Republic, and the Age of Jackson. We will discuss some of the exemplary texts from these periods, analyzing their characteristic forms and themes as well as the history of their interpretation. Specific attention will be paid to key literary concepts, debates, and interpretive methodologies. We will also discuss important issues such as the role of religion in American culture and the separation of church and state; the theory and practice of federalism; enlightenment notions of commerce; slavery; western expansion; and the wars waged against Native American tribes. We will read examples of the sermon, epic, mock epic, occasional poetry; philosophical, religious, revolutionary, and anti-slavery tracts; travel narratives, captivity narratives, pamphlets, broadsides, dramas, speeches, letters; excerpts from early novels; and we will discuss contacts and exchanges between native and colonial cultures and the translation/transcription of traditionally oral tales. Students should walk away from this course with a deeper understanding of the various cultural traditions and innovations that helped lead to new nationhood, and with knowledge of the first literature to self-consciously call itself American.

Attendance for this class is limited to 200 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 10 November 2019 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

"I'm a cowboy, on a steel horse I ride, I'm wanted dead or alive." When Jon Bon Jovi sang these lyrics in his song Dead or Alive, the bandleader relied on the well-established image of the American cowboy who, as a loner, fights for freedom and justice against all odds (and enemies) in the Wild West. Similarly, many other popular representations (in film, advertisements, fiction, and music) evoke the same spirit and imagery. Of all American regions, the West was and remains the most intensely (and stereotypically) mythologized. It has produced such national archetypes as the cowboy, the loner, or the trapper - a strong, virile man, for the most part, who is out in the West to find a space remote from an alleged over-civilization in the east, to conquer a "virgin land" (from native Americans) - and the heart of a woman who looks up to him as her truly masculine hero. Thus, the West was (and still is) envisaged as the epitome of American manhood and national identity.

In this class we will be concerned with the question of how the West was/is defined and redefined, reinforced, and challenged in literary, cultural, and filmic representations, and we shall read these texts against the backdrop of historical events. Our analysis and discussion will take as a major reference point Owen Wister's The Virginian (1902), a novel which in many ways set the tone for the genre of Westerns in the years to come, Frederic Remington's paintings, and Theodore Roosevelt's contemplations on the "strenuous life" out in the West. However, 'marginalized' voices, i.e., of women and Native Americans, will also be focused on, for example, in excerpts from Caroline Kirkland's frontier novel A New Home. Who'll Follow? (1839) or from Sherman Alexie's short story collection The Lone Ranger and Tonto Fistfight in Heaven (1993). We will also discuss Westerns in this class, and analyze true classics of the genre such as High Noon (1952), as well as recent (and subversive) representations in order to come to terms with the concepts and (mal)functions of the very image and stereotype of the West.

The texts will be made available in a reader at the beginning of the semester, but you are asked to purchase Owen Wister's The Virginian before the class starts.

Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2019 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. Kommentar	This class sets out to trace the captivating and variegated movement known as the "Harlem Renaissance," which is generally regarded as the first full-scale surge in cultural and artistic self-representation and activity by African Americans. Taking its origin in Harlem in the early 1920s, but spreading into other urban centers of the United States in the course of the ensuing decade, this movement - known as the "New Negro Movement" at the time - brought to fame a variety of writers, artists, and philosophers who sought to define, promote and change African American culture and literature. In this class we will be concerned with a selection of the fiction, poetry, and political essays produced in the Harlem Renaissance - against the backdrop of politico-cultural developments (segregation, anti-black violence) as well as literary and artistic trends (modernism, Primitivism) of the time. In this context, we will consider representations of gender and sexuality, the tensions between the rural South and the urban North, and the co-existence of celebrations of common black folk culture and bohemian, avant-garde performance situated at the heart of the movement. Class readings (such as excerpts, short stories, selected poetry, and essays) will be provided in a reader at the beginning of the semester; but you need to purchase the four - short - novels which we will read in full length. These are Nella Larsen's Quicksand (Dover), Zora Neale Hurston's Their Eyes Were Watching God (Virago Modern Classics), Langston Hughes's Not Without Laughter (Dover), and Claude McKay's Home to Harlem (Northeastern UP). Further secondary literature will be made available on the reserve shelf in the library. Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Kommentar As a culturally mediated concept, nature is the mutable core of many European American self-definitions. Early colonial writing conceptualized it as raw material for economic gain and a blank slate. Puritans not only read it as a means of subsistence and a space that they needed to subdue but also believed that it embodied divine messages. For Thomas Jefferson, cultivable land was the prerequisite for a republic of virtuous citizens.

Antebellum environmental literature stages nature as a site of such competing economic, religious, and political ideologies while thinking about its ontological status and functions in the age of industrialization, chattel slavery, domestic imperialism, and the myth of the frontier. This class will open up a variety of approaches to nature that illustrate how race, gender, and social class intersect in nineteenth century environmental fiction, poetry, and nonfiction. We will read representations of nature, be they celebratory, sentimental, or uncanny, as always already politically charged, paying attention to how nature was dehistoricized, virginized, and whitewashed, became a tool for both democracy and racial subjugation, and also a regenerative force. Our discussions will revolve around prose texts by James Fenimore Cooper, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Margaret Fuller, Edgar Allan Poe, Caroline Kirkland, Susan Fenimore Cooper, Frederick Douglass, Henry David Thoreau, and Harriet Jacobs as well as poems written by Emily Dickinson, Lydia Sigourney, and Walt Whitman. Our analyses will engage with selected ecocritical, posthumanist, and ecofeminist scholarship that illuminates how literary encounters with nature are racialized and gendered and interact with the concept of the bounded, liberal human subject.

The required reading will be made available on StudIP.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 35 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2019 is required. Kommentar	This class is dedicated to in-depth readings of Marilynne Robinson's first novel and Toni Morrison's Beloved , two texts that engage with the African-American and White feminisms of the 1970s and 1980s while also being intimately tied to the 19 th century. As different as they are with respect to region and political implications, both novels open up utopian, all-female spaces that offer the possibility of self-empowerment. For the novels' characters, who struggle with trauma and memory, identity is permeable. In each case, a younger generation is symbiotically attached to motherly ancestors whose traumas they share.
-----------	--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

Housekeeping is the story of Ruth who recounts her life in a small Idaho town in the 1950s, marked by loss and abandonment. The White middle-class protagonist ultimately turns her back on an average domestic life, following her nomadic aunt Sylvie in a Thoreauvian elimination of everything but the basic necessities. In a Transcendentalist fashion, Sylvie and Ruth cut ties with outdated social connections and leave the domestic sphere with its excess of obsolescent objects behind to achieve a truer and more agentive version of the self. They leave for the unknown, turning transience into the foundational principle of their lives.

Morrison's neo-slave narrative, on the other hand, demands a return to the trauma of the Black diaspora and the atrocities of slavery by forcing readers to actively participate in reassembling the fragments of the characters' memories. It counters playful, postmodernist approaches to history by imagining the perpetual return of the past and its wounds — something that is called rememory in the text. Both collective history and personal memory are inscribed in the flesh in Beloved, which is why we will pay particular attention to the vulnerability and materiality of pained bodies, such as that of the murdered child returning as a monstrous, Gothic hybrid. We will consider the potential healing function of narrativization, a strategy which promises closure and the possibility to reclaim agency. We will also reflect on the ways in which the text resists the narrative containment of trauma and we will address the pitfalls of voyeuristic identification with suffering bodies.

The novels will be made available at the SUB reserve shelf for this class.

Kommentar In the introduction to Ishita Singh's textbooks, the history of the English language is likened to a "rags-to-riches story of the language with humble and savage beginnings which grew to become the medium of literary genius for Chaucer, Shakespeare and Milton and, eventually, to conquer the globe" (2005: 1). However, what if we let English, the language, tell that story? This is what the lecture attempts to do. We turn to texts such as the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, the Orrmulum, Trevisa's translation of the Polychronicon, or Puttenham's Arte of Poesie, circumnavigate their authors and try to listen to what the language itself is able to tell. In doing so, not only will we learn about noticeable features of Old, Middle, and Early Modern English, but also about crucial developments that changed English from a bold synthetic Germanic language into a Romanised analytic one.

Kommentar

What did it sound like when blokes were having an argument in 991? When did the English choose to be equally polite in addressing just anybody by you? How come a homily or a recipe without a title is still recognizable? In this course, students will be introduced to the linguistic field of Pragmatics, which is concerned with language in use. After some introductory sessions, students will analyse historical texts as to their display of speech behavioural patterns, discourse modes and genre conventions. While participants will be exposed to historical corpora and medieval texts, the analysis of historical material will at the same time enable them to be more competent in their understanding of Old and Middle English as well as in their analysis of modern linguistic behaviour, especially in dialogic situations.

Kommentar

For all the importance of the New Testament to the liturgy and salvation history, the text of the Old Testament was clearly of great interest to the Anglo-Saxons. It is the stories of the Hebrew Bible, not so much the gospels, that survive in imposing works of alliterative verse. Ælfric of Eynsham, the period's most productive homilist, frequently turned to Old Testament narrative as well, despite strong reservations about disclosing this difficult material to the general public. In this course, we will seek to discover what drew Anglo-Saxon authors and preachers to the Old Testament.

To this end, we will brush up on patriarchal commentaries and Scripture itself, but above all we will translate a range of excerpts from Old English prose and verse inspired by the narratives of the Hebrew Bible. Navigating homilies, commentaries, and verse retellings, we will address such matters as typology, heroism, foundation myths, and gender, while adducing manuscripts, illustrations, and liturgy. Students will gain a familiarity with Old Testament narrative and its medieval exegesis, but above all they will develop an insight into the minds and imaginations of Anglo-Saxon clerics and poets who saw a market for these texts.

Please note that this is a translation-heavy course.

Kommentar	This course introduces students to the manuscript sources of medieval English with a focus on diachronic script and language change. In this seminar, students will learn about different aspects of manuscript culture (i.e. historiographic manuscripts, changing art in manuscripts, etc.). From a practical perspective, students will learn how to read medieval English manuscripts, prepare transcriptions, discuss language change and dialect, and learn to collate manuscripts of the same texts. Through these exercises, students will gain a better understanding of the ways in which medieval texts were transmitted as well as the types of changes made to manuscripts when they were copied. Assessment will include a written exam (90 minutes). Students are expected to hand in a portfolio that will contain a transcription and written commentary. This will not be marked, but timely submission will be a prerequisite for the exam.

Kommentar	As humans, we have remarkable linguistic abilities: we are able to understand an unlimited number of sentences, including sentences that we haven't heard before. The knowledge that allows us to accomplish this incredible feat is largely unconscious. In this class, we will aim to uncover this knowledge by formulating and testing hypotheses about the interpretation of sentences and their parts. At different points in the class, we may make connections with related fields, like language acquisition. This class will suit you if you are interested in linguistic meaning, are keen on analytical thinking and enjoy theory-building. Regular class participation and class homework are required.

Voraussetzungen Requirements: Regular attendance, active participation and a short reflection on a critical incident in written form, which is part of the Introduction to English Language Teaching portfolio (all in English).

Organisatorisches Registration via StudIP starts on Sunday, September 1, 2019, 8:00 am. The number of participants per course is restricted to 25 students.

Kommentar Our work on intercultural learning is based on clarifying the concept of culture, including current discussions about culture with a "little c" and transculturality. We will look into different models of intercultural competence, develop ways to foster it in the classroom and practice them, for example in role-plays.

Literatur Reading: The set texts will be uploaded at the beginning of term.

Kommentar	Global education brings educational relevance to the foreign language classroom through meaningful content based on real-world topics. With its focus on languages and different cultures and perspectives, the foreign language classroom is an appropriate background for achieving global awareness.
	The ambitious goals of global education require suitable media and methods. Therefore, in this seminar, we will look at texts and films - fictional and non-fictional - which can be used in this context. We will discuss why we should integrate global education goals into the FLC and how we can do that. The participants are also invited to independently select and introduce further material. They will get the chance to develop and present complex competence tasks, which will be discussed in the seminar.

Kommentar	Dystopian fiction creates images of future societies that have developed negatively. Texts like Margaret Atwood's A Handmaid's Tale , Kazuo Ishiguro's Never Let Me Go or Suzanne Collins' The Hunger Games explore topics such as totalitarian governments, questionable scientific achievements, problematic social practices or the destructive effects of climate change. They very often function as analogies for similar issues in the real world and can be read as warnings. As they provide new perspectives on society, dealing with dystopian texts in class can help us reflect on and discuss about the world we live in as well as the one we would like to live in.  We will explore the potential of dystopian texts (novels, films, TV series) in language teaching and think about how we can use them in order to develop students' receptive and productive competences. Participants are also invited to independently select and introduce further material. They will get the chance to create their own complex competence tasks, which will be presented in the seminar.

Kommentar	Übung:  It is one of the biggest challenges to get learners to speak English. With a growing number of students in class and therefore limited individual talking time and learners who are often afraid to speak English, it is up to the teacher to develop suitable tasks and learning arrangements to overcome these obstacles. Tasks should be designed in a way that the need to talk is greater than the fear to make a mistake. They should be motivating and challenging at the same time. This course aims at providing a theoretical basis for efficient and motivational speaking tasks and a variety of different teaching approaches and methods that train speaking competences. Further, all participants will get the chance to develop their own micro teaching units on different topics as well as for different age groups. In addition to that, we will have a look at different teaching materials (videos and films, photos, games and literature) and methods from the perspective of the learners. All in all, this course aims at giving you a hands-on approach to teaching speaking with a theoretical background in mind. Also, you are more than welcome to bring in your questions and ideas. Seminar: On this basis you will develop a research question in one of the areas covered, that you explore in your own internships at school (Forschungspraktikum). Reading: Texts will be provided at the beginning of the semester.

While virtually every learner in Germany uses a smartphone, tablet, or computer on a daily basis, implementation of new media in German FLT classrooms still lags behind: compared to other European countries, German schools equipped with, for example, laptops for every student or reliable Wi-Fi networks are the exception, not the rule. At the same time, teachers face a wide variety of options to choose from - ranging from traditionally physical media like textbooks to numerous competing apps, services, and devices. How, then, do we choose the right media to enrich foreign language teaching in a meaningful way - and not as an end in itself?

This course aims at providing a theoretical basis for the critical implementation of media in FLT by fostering digital literacy skills. For this purpose, we will discuss a variety of methods, approaches, and media, including - but not limited to - computer-/mobile-assisted language learning (MALL/CALL), telecollaboration, digital game-based language learning (DGBLL), tablets and smartphones, and selected apps. Special emphasis is placed on using digital technology to enable virtual exchanges, e.g. by connecting students in your classroom with learners abroad to foster global education and cultural learning.

Participants are encouraged to independently select and present further media applications. They will get the chance to develop and present their own media-assisted tasks, which will be discussed in the seminar.

Kommentar	Short fiction, which comprises amongst others short stories, literary shorts and short films, features specific characteristics that can be of great value for the foreign language classroom. Its brevity, the limitations with regards to the number of characters and plot lines and the many silences ("Leerstellen") can encourage learners to get involved with literature and hereby with the foreign language in use.  This seminar aims at exploring the question of why and how teachers can use short fiction in the EFL classroom. We will discuss possible approaches when dealing with the different kinds of short fiction. Participants will get the chance to develop and present their own micro teaching units based on a piece of short fiction of their own choice.

Kommentar The method of task-based language teaching (TBLT) places the task at the centre of the EFL classroom. This task is a classroom activity that presents students with a (staged) realistic, real-world, meaningful assignment (e.g., a visit to the doctor, writing a blog entry, making a demonstration leaflet). In the task, real-world topics, situations, or problems are dealt with. TBLT assumes that, by introducing meaningful, realistic tasks into the EFL classroom, students may cope with (similar) real-life situations outside the classroom more easily. Hence, TBLT aims to reduce the separation between study and usage of the foreign language.

In this course, we will think about how to divide tasks into their language- and method-related competences, which students need to master in order to successfully complete the task. Also, we will consider how to prepare materials which students work with to develop these competences. These include topic input(s), vocabulary / grammar exercises, text or dialogue models, method trainings, etc.

Above all, we will consider how to design tasks that align with the (obligatory) EFL curriculum and the (available) EFL coursebook, in order to connect our didactic concerns with work life at school.

Kommentar	This course is designed to introduce students to American "Landeskunde" through the study and discussion of selected topics in this field. We will have a look at areas such as the political system of the United States of America, education, media, religion, geography and others. While factual information will certainly play more than a marginal role, the course will not be restricted to a nuts-and-bolts approach, but also analyse and interpret facts and figures in order to provide some deeper insights into the many facets of American life and culture.

Assessment: regular attendance and active participation in class as well as four quizzes at periodic intervals throughout the semester.

Kommentar	This is an introductory course on British Landeskunde (life, culture and institutions). On the course, I want to try to do two things with you: 1. Talk about what kind of country the UK is; e.g. history, geography, and politics, etc. 2. Discuss and practice how everyday life works in the UK. Recommended course books are: James O'Driscoll: Britain, The Country and its People - An Introduction for Learners of English , Oxford University Press (+ the workbook if you can get it) and Fox, Kate: Watching the English, The Hidden Rules of English Behaviour , Hodder, London (any edition). You do not need to buy the books to complete the course. You will be asked to give a presentation (probably in a group) on a subject of your choice. Subjects include: geography, education, political system, British English (language), sport, social life, dos and don'ts, etc. but there will hopefully also be room for your own suggestions. I hope you enjoy it! N.B. You must be registered on FlexNow to pass the course even if there is no final test!

Kommentar This is the first in a series of four lecture courses offered consecutively over a period of two years. It is designed to acquaint students with the literature and culture of North America from the late sixteenth- through the early nineteenth-centuries, i.e. the period of exploration and settlement, the American Revolution, the Early Republic, and the Age of Jackson. We will discuss some of the exemplary texts from these periods, analyzing their characteristic forms and themes as well as the history of their interpretation. Specific attention will be paid to key literary concepts, debates, and interpretive methodologies. We will also discuss important issues such as the role of religion in American culture and the separation of church and state; the theory and practice of federalism; enlightenment notions of commerce; slavery; western expansion; and the wars waged against Native American tribes. We will read examples of the sermon, epic, mock epic, occasional poetry; philosophical, religious, revolutionary, and anti-slavery tracts; travel narratives, captivity narratives, pamphlets, broadsides, dramas, speeches, letters; excerpts from early novels; and we will discuss contacts and exchanges between native and colonial cultures and the translation/transcription of traditionally oral tales. Students should walk away from this course with a deeper understanding of the various cultural traditions and innovations that helped lead to new nationhood, and with knowledge of the first literature to self-consciously call itself American.

Attendance for this class is limited to 200 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 10 November 2019 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar

"I'm a cowboy, on a steel horse I ride, I'm wanted dead or alive." When Jon Bon Jovi sang these lyrics in his song Dead or Alive, the bandleader relied on the well-established image of the American cowboy who, as a loner, fights for freedom and justice against all odds (and enemies) in the Wild West. Similarly, many other popular representations (in film, advertisements, fiction, and music) evoke the same spirit and imagery. Of all American regions, the West was and remains the most intensely (and stereotypically) mythologized. It has produced such national archetypes as the cowboy, the loner, or the trapper - a strong, virile man, for the most part, who is out in the West to find a space remote from an alleged over-civilization in the east, to conquer a "virgin land" (from native Americans) - and the heart of a woman who looks up to him as her truly masculine hero. Thus, the West was (and still is) envisaged as the epitome of American manhood and national identity.

In this class we will be concerned with the question of how the West was/is defined and redefined, reinforced, and challenged in literary, cultural, and filmic representations, and we shall read these texts against the backdrop of historical events. Our analysis and discussion will take as a major reference point Owen Wister's The Virginian (1902), a novel which in many ways set the tone for the genre of Westerns in the years to come, Frederic Remington's paintings, and Theodore Roosevelt's contemplations on the "strenuous life" out in the West. However, 'marginalized' voices, i.e., of women and Native Americans, will also be focused on, for example, in excerpts from Caroline Kirkland's frontier novel A New Home. Who'll Follow? (1839) or from Sherman Alexie's short story collection The Lone Ranger and Tonto Fistfight in Heaven (1993). We will also discuss Westerns in this class, and analyze true classics of the genre such as High Noon (1952), as well as recent (and subversive) representations in order to come to terms with the concepts and (mal)functions of the very image and stereotype of the West.

The texts will be made available in a reader at the beginning of the semester, but you are asked to purchase Owen Wister's The Virginian before the class starts.

Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2019 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. Kommentar

This class sets out to trace the captivating and variegated movement known as the "Harlem Renaissance," which is generally regarded as the first full-scale surge in cultural and artistic self-representation and activity by African Americans. Taking its origin in Harlem in the early 1920s, but spreading into other urban centers of the United States in the course of the ensuing decade, this movement - known as the "New Negro Movement" at the time - brought to fame a variety of writers, artists, and philosophers who sought to define, promote and change African American culture and literature.

In this class we will be concerned with a selection of the fiction, poetry, and political essays produced in the Harlem Renaissance - against the backdrop of politico-cultural developments (segregation, anti-black violence) as well as literary and artistic trends (modernism, Primitivism) of the time. In this context, we will consider representations of gender and sexuality, the tensions between the rural South and the urban North, and the co-existence of celebrations of common black folk culture and bohemian, avant-garde performance situated at the heart of the movement.

Class readings (such as excerpts, short stories, selected poetry, and essays) will be provided in a reader at the beginning of the semester; but you need to purchase the four - short - novels which we will read in full length. These are Nella Larsen's Quicksand (Dover), Zora Neale Hurston's Their Eyes Were Watching God (Virago Modern Classics), Langston Hughes's Not Without Laughter (Dover), and Claude McKay's Home to Harlem (Northeastern UP).

Further secondary literature will be made available on the reserve shelf in the library.

Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2019 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. Kommentar	As a culturally mediated concept, nature is the mutable core of many European American self-definitions. Early colonial writing conceptualized it as raw material for economic gain and a blank slate. Puritans not only read it as a means of subsistence and a space that they needed to subdue but also believed that it embodied divine messages. For Thomas Jefferson, cultivable land was the prerequisite for a republic of virtuous citizens. Antebellum environmental literature stages nature as a site of such competing economic, religious, and political ideologies while thinking about its ontological status and functions in the age of industrialization, chattel slavery, domestic imperialism, and the myth of the frontier. This class will open up a variety of approaches to nature that illustrate how race, gender, and social class intersect in nineteenth century environmental fiction, poetry, and nonfiction. We will read representations of nature, be they celebratory, sentimental, or uncanny, as always already politically charged, paying attention to how nature was dehistoricized, virginized, and whitewashed, became a tool for both democracy and racial subjugation, and also a regenerative force. Our discussions will revolve around prose texts by James Fenimore Cooper, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Margaret Fuller, Edgar Allan Poe, Caroline Kirkland, Susan Fenimore Cooper, Frederick Douglass, Henry David Thoreau, and Harriet Jacobs as well as poems written by Emily Dickinson, Lydia Sigourney, and Walt Whitman. Our analyses will engage with selected ecocritical, posthumanist, and ecofeminist scholarship that illuminates how literary encounters with nature are racialized and gendered and interact with the concept of the bounded, liberal human subject.

The required reading will be made available on StudIP.

Kommentar	This class is dedicated to in-depth readings of Marilynne Robinson's first novel and Toni Morrison's Beloved , two texts that engage with the African-American and White feminisms of the 1970s and 1980s while also being intimately tied to the 19 th century. As different as they are with respect to region and political implications, both novels open up utopian, all-female spaces that offer the possibility of self-empowerment. For the novels' characters, who struggle with trauma and memory, identity is permeable. In each case, a younger generation is symbiotically attached to motherly ancestors whose traumas they share.  Housekeeping is the story of Ruth who recounts her life in a small Idaho town in the 1950s, marked by loss and abandonment. The White middle-class protagonist ultimately turns her back on an average domestic life, following her nomadic aunt Sylvie in a Thoreauvian elimination of everything but the basic necessities. In a Transcendentalist fashion, Sylvie and Ruth cut ties with outdated social connections and leave the domestic sphere with its excess of obsolescent objects behind to achieve a truer and more agentive version of the self. They leave for the unknown, turning transience into the foundational principle of their lives.  Morrison's neo-slave narrative, on the other hand, demands a return to the trauma of the Black diaspora and the atrocities of slavery by forcing readers to actively participate in reassembling the fragments of the characters' memories. It counters playful, postmodernist approaches to history by imagining the perpetual return of the past and its wounds — something that is called rememory in the text. Both collective history and personal memory are inscribed in the flesh in Beloved , which is why we will pay particular attention to the vulnerability and materiality of pained bodies, such as that of the murdered child returning as a monstrous, Gothic hybrid. We will consider the potential healing function of narrativization, a strategy which promises closure and the possibility to reclaim agency. We will also reflect on the ways in which the text resists the narrative containment of trauma and we will address the pitfalls of voyeuristic identification with suffering bodies.
	The novels will be made available at the SUB reserve shelf for this class.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 35 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2019 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar	This course introduces students to the methods for the analysis and interpretation of visual media, with a special focus on film, video, and television. Taking a closer look at a number of examples from American film and television history, from the silent era to New Hollywood and the contemporary cinema, we will consider various parameters such as storytelling and narrative style, mise-en-scène and setting, cinematography, editing, sound, color, and special effects. At least one session will be dedicated to each of these aesthetic dimensions: we will closely examine selected scenes and discuss how they can be related to a film in its entirety. We will also consider how movies can be read according to genre—the western, melodrama, or the road movie—and explore how generic parameters contribute to the overall form and interpretation of a film. While feature and documentary films will constitute the primary material for close analysis, we will also consider specific television formats, especially serial forms. Here narrative modes depart significantly from feature films, due to the different spatiotemporal dimensions of storytelling.  Learning how to read films and television shows with regard to formal aspects will acquaint students with the aesthetic and narrative features of screen media. Students will acquire the analytical skills to critically read and interpret screen media by relating their formal features and modes of storytelling to theme and sociopolitical contexts.
	Class discussions will be based on Timothy Corrigan and Patricia White's The Film Experience , a comprehensive introduction to the study of film, methods of film analysis, and key concepts of cinema and television studies featuring many examples and images.
	Please acquire a copy of this book that we will use throughout the semester.

Kommentar	In this seminar we will explore US art museums and the history of art museum architecture. Starting in 1870 with the opening of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, we will work through 150 years of US architectural history, ending most likely at the ongoing building project of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. In each session we will discuss one museum building/complex to trace local histories and challenges and the architectural solutions for them to then consider more abstract developments. Discussing the institution and its history from a material perspective will open up new perspectives in understanding how art museums relate to their communities, their objects, their values. In this way, the very form of museums will function as a lens through which to discuss greater political, societal, and cultural shifts that occurred throughout the 20th century. The development from museum buildings functioning as symbols that gesture towards past achievements of "Culture" to functioning as icons used to establish marketable brands, speak to general changes in US and Western society that we will trace over the course of this class. We will consider specific case studies of US art museum architecture, architectural theories as they relate to concepts of space, identity, authority, and the public, and some methodologies of cultural studies relating to representation, the public, and education. Texts will be made available to students. Active participation is required and expected. Recommended reading: Newhouse, Victoria. Towards a New Museum. Expanded Edition. New York: Montecelli, 2006. Kommentar	"Drama is life with the dull bits cut out." -- Alfred Hitchcock
	The film critics Jonathan Freedman and Richard Millington stated that "[a]t the center of Hitchcock's Hollywood films stands a sustained, specific, and extraordinarily acute exploration of American culture." (Hitchcock's America 5). This class will retrace the American period of Hitchcock's career (from 1940 to the late 1960s) by analyzing and discussing a selection of his films against their specific socio-cultural and historic backdrop, starting with his Hollywood debut Rebecca (1940) and continuing (among others) with Rope (1948), Rear Window (1954), Vertigo (1959), Psycho (1960), and The Birds (1963).
	Texts will be made available to students. Active participation is required and expected.
	Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 35 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2019 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.
	Important: If you take this class as part of modules B.EP.44 or B.AS.103, you need to have successfully completed the "Introduction to Film and Media Analysis" class of the same module before. Please note that this is a mandatory prerequisite.

Kommentar	In the introduction to Ishtia Singh's textbooks, the history of the English language is likened to a "rags-to-riches story of the language with humble and savage beginnings which grew to become the medium of literary genius for Chaucer, Shakespeare and Milton and, eventually, to conquer the globe" (2005: 1). However, what if we let English, the language, tell that story? This is what the lecture attempts to do. We turn to texts such as the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, the Orrmulum, Trevisa's translation of the Polychronicon, or Puttenham's Arte of Poesie, circumnavigate their authors and try to listen to what the language itself is able to tell. In doing so, not only will we learn about noticeable features of Old, Middle, and Early Modern English, but also about crucial developments that changed English from a bold synthetic Germanic language into a Romanised analytic one.

B.EP.42 Vertiefungsmodul Linguistik

Dieses Modul gibt es in 2 Varianten:

- Schwerpunkt Advanced Syntax or Advanced Semantics (B.EP.42a)
- Schwerpunkt General Linguistics (B.EP.42b)

Es sind aber in jedem Fall Kurse beider Bereiche zu belegen!

Advanced English Syntax OR Advanced English Semantics

4504856	Advanced Syntax OR Advanced Semantics: Factoring out 3rd Factor Effects in Minimalism
	Seminar SWS: 2; Anz. Teiln.: 30	Bode, Stefanie
	Di 12:15 - 13:45 Raum: Verfügungs VG 1.105 , wöchentlich Von: 22.10.2019 Bis: 04.02.2020
Module	B.EP.42b.1: Advanced English Syntax/Advanced English Semantics (2 C) B.EP.42a.1: Advanced English Syntax/Advanced English Semantics (3 C) M.EP.11a.1: Tools and Skills - Theory
Organisatorisches	Registration Stud.IP: 1 Sept - 31 Oct, 2019
Kommentar	Generative linguists talk about three general factors: Universal Grammar (UG), linguistic data, and language independent principles which play an increasingly important role. What is this third factor and what implications does it have for concrete syntactic analyses? How do language-independent principles act on language? Together we will see what exactly is meant by this three-fold system and how a merged-based UG can be further minimized and simplified by invoking the "third factor".  The fourth factor basically needed for a successful discussion is you. Everyone is welcome to join us.

General Linguistics

4504239	General linguistics: Language Processing
	Seminar SWS: 2; Anz. Teiln.: 30	Farke, Hildegard
	Mo 14:15 - 15:45 Raum: Verfügungs VG 0.111 , wöchentlich Von: 21.10.2019 Bis: 03.02.2020
Module	B.EP.42a.2: General Linguistics (2 C) B.EP.42b.2: General Linguistics (3 C) M.EP.11a.2: Tools and Skills - General Linguistics
Organisatorisches	Registration Stud.IP: 1 Sept - 31 Oct, 2019
Kommentar	How do humans produce and understand language? What are the basic processes and representations involved in language use? Psycholinguistic research is concerned with providing an account of the mental processes by means of which language processing is carried out in both the production and the comprehension of linguistic utterances. This interacts with a theory of language providing a formal account of the knowledge of our linguistic competence. We will take a particular perspective to the study of psycholinguistic processes, which is based on a minimalist conception of language. The aim of this course is to introduce into the methods, terms, and concepts of psycholinguistics using data from observation and from psycholinguistic experiments.

Kommentar	This course is designed to introduce students to American "Landeskunde" through the study and discussion of selected topics in this field. We will have a look at areas such as the political system of the United States of America, education, media, religion, geography and others. While factual information will certainly play more than a marginal role, the course will not be restricted to a nuts-and-bolts approach, but also analyse and interpret facts and figures in order to provide some deeper insights into the many facets of American life and culture.  Assessment: regular attendance and active participation in class as well as four quizzes at periodic intervals throughout the semester.

Kommentar This is an introductory course on British Landeskunde (life, culture and institutions). On the course, I want to try to do two things with you: 1. Talk about what kind of country the UK is; e.g. history, geography, and politics, etc. 2. Discuss and practice how everyday life works in the UK. Recommended course books are: James O'Driscoll: Britain, The Country and its People - An Introduction for Learners of English, Oxford University Press (+ the workbook if you can get it) and Fox, Kate: Watching the English, The Hidden Rules of English Behaviour, Hodder, London (any edition). You do not need to buy the books to complete the course. You will be asked to give a presentation (probably in a group) on a subject of your choice. Subjects include: geography, education, political system, British English (language), sport, social life, dos and don'ts, etc. but there will hopefully also be room for your own suggestions. I hope you enjoy it! N.B. You must be registered on FlexNow to pass the course even if there is no final test!

Kommentar	This course is designed to introduce students to American "Landeskunde" through the study and discussion of selected topics in this field. We will have a look at areas such as the political system of the United States of America, education, media, religion, geography and others. While factual information will certainly play more than a marginal role, the course will not be restricted to a nuts-and-bolts approach, but also analyse and interpret facts and figures in order to provide some deeper insights into the many facets of American life and culture.

Assessment: regular attendance and active participation in class as well as four quizzes at periodic intervals throughout the semester.

Kommentar	This is an introductory course on British Landeskunde (life, culture and institutions). On the course, I want to try to do two things with you: 1. Talk about what kind of country the UK is; e.g. history, geography, and politics, etc. 2. Discuss and practice how everyday life works in the UK. Recommended course books are: James O'Driscoll: Britain, The Country and its People - An Introduction for Learners of English , Oxford University Press (+ the workbook if you can get it) and Fox, Kate: Watching the English, The Hidden Rules of English Behaviour , Hodder, London (any edition). You do not need to buy the books to complete the course. You will be asked to give a presentation (probably in a group) on a subject of your choice. Subjects include: geography, education, political system, British English (language), sport, social life, dos and don'ts, etc. but there will hopefully also be room for your own suggestions. I hope you enjoy it! N.B. You must be registered on FlexNow to pass the course even if there is no final test!

Kommentar	This is an introductory course on phonetics and phonology based on British English. You will have to learn some theory but the course is designed to be practical in that we will be discussing the way phonetics and phonology influence the meaning and the function of spoken and written English. We will look at and discuss various aspects of phonetics and phonology, e.g. the organs of speech, the manner and place of articulation, intonation, rhythm, and connected speech. You will also have to learn how to transcribe. You cannot do the course without the Reader. Please also see my course description in the Reader. Sign-up is via StudIP. Participation limit is 80 per semester.

Kommentar	This course is especially designed for International BA-students on exchange programmes spending one or two semesters of their studies at our Department. It includes grammar practice, as well as work on German-English translation and on British life and institutions ("Landeskunde"). It will pay particular attention to the participants' special needs as students coming from a variety of different cultures with a broad range of different backgrounds in English. Exchange students intending to earn credits in Grammar, Translation, or British Landeskunde (or any combination of these) are strongly recommended to sign up on this course. To earn the 6 ECTS-credits for this course, participants will have to attend regularly, give a presentation in English and take a final written test.

Kommentar	This course is designed to introduce students to American "Landeskunde" through the study and discussion of selected topics in this field. We will have a look at areas such as the political system of the United States of America, education, media, religion, geography and others. While factual information will certainly play more than a marginal role, the course will not be restricted to a nuts-and-bolts approach, but also analyse and interpret facts and figures in order to provide some deeper insights into the many facets of American life and culture.
	Assessment: regular attendance and active participation in class as well as four quizzes at periodic intervals throughout the semester.

Kommentar	This is an introductory course on British Landeskunde (life, culture and institutions). On the course, I want to try to do two things with you: 1. Talk about what kind of country the UK is; e.g. history, geography, and politics, etc. 2. Discuss and practice how everyday life works in the UK. Recommended course books are: James O'Driscoll: Britain, The Country and its People - An Introduction for Learners of English , Oxford University Press (+ the workbook if you can get it) and Fox, Kate: Watching the English, The Hidden Rules of English Behaviour , Hodder, London (any edition). You do not need to buy the books to complete the course. You will be asked to give a presentation (probably in a group) on a subject of your choice. Subjects include: geography, education, political system, British English (language), sport, social life, dos and don'ts, etc. but there will hopefully also be room for your own suggestions. I hope you enjoy it! N.B. You must be registered on FlexNow to pass the course even if there is no final test!

Kommentar	This is an intermediate ( Vertiefung ) / advanced course for students who enjoy creative writing in English. You must have the basic module to do this course! Its aim is not to create writing at a professional level to be published, but simply to explore writing in English creatively and to have fun. We will discuss various aspects and forms of creative writing, e.g. haikus, poetry, short stories, play-writing, etc. and you will be expected to hand in some of these as homework and / or as course assignments.

Please note: To be able to register for this course as part of M.EP.032, you need to have taken the diagnostic test in either April or October.

Kommentar	Margaret Atwood is one of Canada's most successful and popular writers and well known for the power of her fiction, the intricacies of her poetry, and the illumination of her literary criticism. She is best known for her environmental and especially feminist perspective.

Her novel The Handmaid's Tale (1985) together with the Hulu TV adaptation has become a major instrument for political and human rights activism this year for example. Although having a great focus on environmental and political issues commented in her dystopian fictions, Atwood has rooted most of her writings on and in her own country of Canada, especially her earlier texts.

Consequently, this seminar will investigate the idea of Canada, its nature and people, in Atwood's fictions. We will discuss concepts of national and gender identities, the concern about conservation and preservation of nature, i.e. the relationship between nature and culture, and the literary imagination of the Canadian North as a mystique land and its impact on Canadian writers.

Kommentar Mary Wollstonecraft (1759-1797) is the author of A Vindication of the Rights of Woman (1792), which has earned her the accolade of mother of feminism, but she is also the mother of one of the best-known novelists in the English language, Mary Shelley. Mary Wollstonecraft was associated with the circle of radical dissenters and thinkers around Rev. Dr. Richard Price through whom she met her publisher, Joseph Johnson, who was to introduce her to the revolutionary writer Thomas Paine and to her future husband, the radical philosopher William Godwin. Johnson's commission for an eye-witness epistolary account of the French Revolution took her to France in 1792 where she became acquainted with the English and American circle of expatriates who were supporters of the Revolution, including Helen Maria Williams, and the American Gilbert Imlay, who would become her lover and the father of her first child. Wollstonecraft was a radical thinker and her work is a call for social and political reform, most pressingly for an improvement of the education of girls and the lives of women. We shall read her two Vindications (of the Rights of Men and of the Rights of Woman), excerpts from her eye-witness account of the French Revolution, her Scandinavian Letters, and her novel Maria, or the Wrongs of Woman, as well as other shorter texts and excerpts which will be provided via Stud.IP. Please purchase your own copies of Mary Wollstonecraft's A Vindication of the Rights of Men; A Vindication of the Rights of Woman; An Historical and Moral View of the French Revolution (Oxford World's Classics); Maria, or the Wrongs of Woman (preferably the Norton edition or Oxford World's Classics), and an edition of Letters Written during a Short Residence in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark (these three editions are recommended: Penguin, ed. Richard Holmes, Oxford World's Classics, ed. Tone Brekke and Jon Mee, or the Broadview edition, ed. Ingrid Horrocks).

Kommentar

This course will explore recent plays by contemporary female (and feminist) British dramatists, giving students ample opportunities to perfect their analytical skills in a genre that is less well known and studied than poetry or the novel. We will investigate how these plays are situated within the tradition of British theatre, which political and social topics they address and we will finally ask whether gender is still a relevant analytical category when it comes to discussing drama. All plays are available on the database "Drama Online", recently acquired by the SUB. A list of the plays we will read in the course will be put on StudIP shortly before registration date.

Registration in StudIP: 1 September to 1 October

This seminar will explore the ways in which the French Revolution, as an event as well as a source of new ideals, affected English literature in subsequent decades. Topics to be discussed will include the representation of France at the time of the events, the following spread of the new values in Europe, the admiration as well as rejection of these by English writers, the revolution's inspiration on the budding women's and workers' movements.

Readings: political/ philosophical writings by Edmund Burke, Thomas Paine, William Godwin, and Mary Wollstonecraft; poetry by William Wordsworth, Percy B. Shelley, and William Blake (to found in StudIP); and the following novels: William Godwin, Caleb Williams; Mary Wollstonecraft, Mary. A Fiction and Maria; or, The Wrongs of Woman; Mary Hays, The Victim of Prejudice; Jane Austen, Northanger Abbey; Mary Shelley, Frankenstein; and Charles Dickens, A Tale of Two Cities (to be purchased or loaned by students).

Recommended reading: Aidan Day, Romanticism. London: Routledge, 1996.

Registration in StudIP: 1 September to 1 October

Mary Wollstonecraft (1759-1797) is the author of A Vindication of the Rights of Woman (1792), which has earned her the accolade of mother of feminism, but she is also the mother of one of the best-known novelists in the English language, Mary Shelley. Mary Wollstonecraft was associated with the circle of radical dissenters and thinkers around Rev. Dr. Richard Price through whom she met her publisher, Joseph Johnson, who was to introduce her to the revolutionary writer Thomas Paine and to her future husband, the radical philosopher William Godwin. Johnson's commission for an eye-witness epistolary account of the French Revolution took her to France in 1792 where she became acquainted with the English and American circle of expatriates who were supporters of the Revolution, including Helen Maria Williams, and the American Gilbert Imlay, who would become her lover and the father of her first child. Wollstonecraft was a radical thinker and her work is a call for social and political reform, most pressingly for an improvement of the education of girls and the lives of women. We shall read her two Vindications (of the Rights of Men and of the Rights of Woman), excerpts from her eye-witness account of the French Revolution, her Scandinavian Letters, and her novel Maria, or the Wrongs of Woman, as well as other shorter texts and excerpts which will be provided via Stud.IP. Please purchase your own copies of Mary Wollstonecraft's A Vindication of the Rights of Men; A Vindication of the Rights of Woman; An Historical and Moral View of the French Revolution (Oxford World's Classics); Maria, or the Wrongs of Woman (preferably the Norton edition or Oxford World's Classics), and an edition of Letters Written during a Short Residence in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark (these three editions are recommended: Penguin, ed. Richard Holmes, Oxford World's Classics, ed. Tone Brekke and Jon Mee, or the Broadview edition, ed. Ingrid Horrocks).

Kommentar This course will explore recent plays by contemporary female (and feminist) British dramatists, giving students ample opportunities to perfect their analytical skills in a genre that is less well known and studied than poetry or the novel. We will investigate how these plays are situated within the tradition of British theatre, which political and social topics they address and we will finally ask whether gender is still a relevant analytical category when it comes to discussing drama. All plays are available on the database "Drama Online", recently acquired by the SUB. A list of the plays we will read in the course will be put on StudIP shortly before registration date.

Kommentar

The colloquium invites advanced students who are preparing or already working on their B.A. or M.A. thesis. It will provide the opportunity to present and discuss your work in progress and receive valuable feedback. Further sessions will be on academic writing, research, and current developments in American cultural and literary studies as well as critical theory.

The course also gives students the opportunity to suggest specific topics and/or theoretical texts relevant to the field of American Studies and with regard to current research projects that may be taken up in individual class discussions. If you have a particular topic or text in mind that you want to propose for discussion, please send an email to Prof. Tischleder before the beginning of the semester.

If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.

Students who wish to take this class as part of module M.EP.09b and who need to write a 'Forschungsbericht' as a 'Prüfungsleistung' in this module, too, are asked to contact Prof. Tischleder before the beginning of the semester.

Please also note that we also recommend to take this colloquium as a voluntary component of module B.EP.51, i.e., before you prepare your B.A. thesis in North American Studies. While you will not be given credit for the colloquium in the context of this module, participation is still highly recommended.

Registration: Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2019 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar In this course the sea takes center stage: The ocean, seaside towns, the lives on ships, from sixteenth-century explorers and the experience of the middle passage to contemporary beach cultures and sea traffic of people, goods, and garbage. We will also explore the sea as a habitat for many different species and consider how fiction, poetry, and (scientific) nonfiction depict the lives of sea creatures, maritime forms of cohabitation and struggles for survival. Texts to be discussed include early travel writings, including Olaudah Equiano's The Interesting Narrative of a Life. We will read portions of Herman Melville's Moby Dick and his tale Benito Cereno as well as poetry by Emily Dickinson, Walt Whitman, William Carlos Williams, Langston Hughes, Marianne Moore, Elizabeth Bishop, and others.

Another concern of the course is the richness of life forms underwater, which have long been overlooked and underestimated. We will discuss nonfiction books that take seriously the intelligence, sentience, and emotional being of mammals, fish, and cephalopods: Jonathan Balcombe's What a Fish Knows: The Inner Lives of Our Underwater Cousins, Peter Godfrey-Smith's Other Minds: The Octopus and the Evolution of Intelligent Life, and Neil Shubin's Your Inner Fish, both a PBS series and a book, which traces human evolution back to the earliest forms of life on Earth—a fish that "crawled onto land 375 million years ago." Considering the evolutionary and ecological significance of the sea, we cannot ignore the ways that human enterprises impact maritime life in ever more harmful ways—through pollution, industrial fishing, and the destruction of maritime ecosystems; we will discuss these issues with regard to documentary films such as A Plastic Ocean (2016), Sonic Sea (2016), Chasing Coral (2017), and Blackfish (2013).

Moreover, we will reflect how the sea has inspired the environmental imagination and philosophical thinking in two recent books: In Chloe Aridjis's Sea Monsters (2018), the ocean itself is seen to "write and rewrite its long ribbon of foam" while beaches suggest a "conversation between the elements." The novel reflects the lives of surfers, seafarers, and beachcombers as well as that of sunken ships at the bottom of the sea. Melissa McCarthy's Sharks, Death, Surfers (2019) offers a creative mediation on sharks in writing and art through a range of historical contexts.

The overall aim of the course is to gain an understanding of the rich cultural imaginary of maritime life—from its fictional and documentary forms to its philosophical dimensions and ecocritical challenges.

Please acquire copies of the following books and read them before the beginning of the semester:

- Chloe Aridjis, Sea Monsters (2018)
- Melissa McCarthy, Sharks, Death, Surfers (2019)

of the "Lamplighter," and other books neither better nor worse? -- worse they could not be, and better they need not be, when they sell by the 100,000."

This is what an outraged, frustrated, and potentially envious (?) Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote to his publisher in 1855 about the (commercial) success of contemporary women's writing in America. These lines draw attention to questions revolving around literary taste, quality, and modes of writing that are - supposedly - contingent on gender.

This class sets out to discuss the origins and the dynamic development of this "damned mob of scribbling women" in the American literary scene of the nineteenth century, focusing on the variegated genres and styles of writing in American women's literature. While Hawthorne took issue with the highly popular sentimental literature of writers like Maria Cummins or Susan Warner in the mid-century, in reality, the modes of female writing were far more diverse, for example addressing gender inequality, promoting abolitionism and political participation, oscillating between the private and the public sphere, embracing or criticizing the concepts of 'true womanhood' or its successor, 'new womanhood,' in the last decades of the century.

In order to trace these topics and concepts, we will investigate theoretical texts that engage with the so-called "feminization of American culture" (Ann Douglas) in the nineteenth century, discuss different concepts of womanhood and their embeddedness in political and socio-economic discourses of the time, and then relate those discussions to selected American women's writings spanning from the 1820s and the years of Jacksonian democracy to the late 19th century. Our discussions will revolve around prose texts by Catharine Maria Sedgwick, Caroline Kirkland, Margaret Fuller, Susan Warner, Maria Cummins, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Harriet Jacobs, Harriet Wilson, Grace King, Kate Chopin, and Charlotte Perkins Gilman as well as poems written by Emily Dickinson or Lydia Sigourney (please note that this is a preliminary list which will be finalized and slightly condensed by the beginning of the winter semester).

A number of readings will come in the form of excerpts or single chapters; most texts will be made available in an e-reader via Stud.IP, but you are asked to purchase the following two novels which we will discuss in full length:

Catharine Maria Sedgwick's Hope Leslie (1827, Penguin edition preferred) and Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin (1852; Norton Critical Edition by Elizabeth Ammons preferred).

Further secondary literature will be made available on the reserve shelf in the library.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 September and 30 September 2019 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester. Kommentar	William S. Burroughs (1914-1997), allegedly "the only American novelist [...] who may conceivably be possessed by genius" (Norman Mailer) and author of The Naked Lunch , the infamous "endless novel which will drive everybody mad" (Allen Ginsberg), has once been regarded as one of literature's most controversial and transgressive protagonists. Today, he seems to have made his way into the canon as a master avant-gardist, as an iconized counter-cultural figure, and as a trailblazer for contemporary pop culture.
-----------	-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

This class will revisit Burroughs's aesthetico-political axioms and their philosophical implications from a contemporary perspective, not only by critically engaging with his work in the field of literature and beyond (incl. film and visual arts) but also by analyzing works by artists inspired by Burroughs's oeuvre such as Kathy Acker or Genesis Breyer P-Orridge (among others).

Texts will be made available to students. Active participation is required and expected.

Kommentar

In literature, (most) text types, or genres, can be identified fairly easily. For instance, a poem is a sonnet if it adheres to a well-defined set of features. In daily life, we experience hardly any difficulties to identify a given text as letter, obituary or joke. On closer inspection, it may, however, be quite difficult to name and describe all of their characteristics. Therefore, the first objective of this seminar is to enable us to analyse texts and categorise them accordingly. The second objective of the course is to ask questions such as the following. Which text types exist in English? Which text types existed in Old and Middle English? Did they change over time and, if so, how? By answering these and other questions, we might learn, for instance, what distinguished an Anglo-Saxon writ from a regol or tæcing. This will yield a general understanding of text types and what they tell us about the culture in which they are found.

Kommentar

There are different consequences of language contact. There is, for instance, language mixture, i.e. two languages combine in various ways to form what is called a pidgin language. Another consequence is very serious. Language contact might mean language death for one of the involved languages. On a lighter note, one could answer the question "What are consequences of language contact?": English. Why? Because English "has been contact-derived from its very beginnings onwards" (Hundt/Schreier 2013: 1). So, in this course we should like to look at various contact scenarios and what impact these had in the development of certain structural features of English.

Kommentar This course is about the division of labor between syntax and semantics. We will focus on linguistic phenomena that have been used to support covert syntactic operations and semantically motivated unpronounced elements such as indices or complex traces. We will compare this approach to analyses from the Categorial Grammar tradition that permit a direct interpretation of the surface structures, but require a more powerful, less restricted set of semantic operations.
Topics include quantifier scope, issues in the semantics of pronouns (e.g. weak crossover effects and 'paycheck' pronouns), ellipsis in coordination, reconstruction effects in wh-questions and relative clauses, and the hypothesis that intensional constructions involve covert world/situation pronouns.
In order to understand the techniques needed to account for these phenomena in the semantics, and the empirical consequences of both approaches, we will read parts of Pauline Jacobson's textbook "Compositional Semantics: An Introduction to the Syntax/Semantics Interface" (2014) and contrast the analyses discussed there with proposals from the recent research literature.

Kommentar	Many of the world's languages allow the subject of the sentence to be unexpressed, a phenomenon known as "pro(noun) drop". In a language like Italian, Gianni parla "Gianni speaks" and Parla "(S)he speaks" are both grammatical sentences. This is in contrast to a language like English, in which not expressing the subject leads to an ungrammatical sentence: *Speaks. The difference between being and not being able to leave the subject unexpressed (or, to put it differently, to have a "null subject") has been related to the richness of the verbal paradigm of a language. Whereas Italian has six different agreement endings in the present tense, English only marks the 3rd person singular differently (with an -s affix, as in John speak-s). Although this correlation with rich agreement is pervasive, it does not successfully capture all the cross-linguistic variation that is attested. Languages like Japanese and Chinese, for instance, allow unexpressed arguments (including subjects) in the absence of any agreement. Trickier perhaps are languages that allow pro drop under certain conditions only. Some languages only allow it in certain but not all person/number contexts, such as Finnish or colloquial variants of German. In this course we will discuss the notion of pro-drop in its full broadness by investigating prominent and novel papers on this topic.

Kommentar	This is an intermediate ( Vertiefung ) / advanced course for students who enjoy creative writing in English. You must have the basic module to do this course! Its aim is not to create writing at a professional level to be published, but simply to explore writing in English creatively and to have fun. We will discuss various aspects and forms of creative writing, e.g. haikus, poetry, short stories, play-writing, etc. and you will be expected to hand in some of these as homework and / or as course assignments.

Please note: To be able to register for this course as part of M.EP.032, you need to have taken the diagnostic test in either April or October.

Kommentar	This is an intermediate - advanced English language course (Vertiefungsmodul). The main aim of the course is to increase and improve your active vocabulary in selected fields, e.g. politics, idioms, travel and transport, medical English, and the media. In class, you will be asked to give a presentation on your selected field and to encourage class participants to learn the new vocabulary by actively using it in class, e.g. in a dialogue, cloze text, role play, etc. In addition, we will also focus on various aspects of vocabulary and vocab learning, e.g. translation, example, special features, etc. The course book is Advanced Vocabulary in Use, Michael McCarthy, Felicity O'Dell, but you do not need to buy it - there are copies in the departmental library. N.B.
